Cilji in kompetence:

Predmet predstavi raziskovalni načrt, ki gre preko razlik med subjektom in objektom. Spodbuja študentke in študente, da ponovno premisijo kolonialno preteklost evro-ameriške znanosti, veljavnost in avtoritet v akademskem svetu in raziskovalnih procesih na splošno. V kontekstu dekolonizacije so epistemološka moč, hierarhije in raznolikosti ustvarjanja znanja postale problematizirane. Študentke in študenti bodo pridobili novo razumevanje dokazov, postopkov pridobivanja trditev o vednosti in njihovih ovrednotenj. Tovrstni pristop bo

Objectives and competences:

This course introduces a research design beyond object and subject divides. It urges students to rethink the colonial past of Euro-American science, validity, authority in academia, and the research process as a long-term commitment. In decolonial context, epistemological power hierarchies and diversity of knowledge-production have become more discussed. Students will gain novel understanding of cultural construction of evidence, approaching knowledge claims, and their evaluation. Examples will be given from Amazonian ethnographies that podkrepljen s primeri iz amazonskih etnografij, ki so priskrbele nove konceptualne vpoglede. Kako lahko razumemo, organiziramo in ovrednotimo vednosti in znanja, ki nam jih ponujajo nečloveška bitja in realnosti (kot so živali, rastline, atmosferski pojavi) in kaj lahko z njimi pridobimo? Predmet tudi obravnava načine opravljanja raziskav z drugim – in ne le o drugem – in ponudi nekaj metod skupnih raziskav ter raziskav, ki temeljijo na skupnosti. Zadnje predavanje vključuje študijo raziskovalne etike in raziskovalnih soglasij, kakor tudi trenutne pravne aspekte raziskav, ki vključujejo človeka, v EU.

have generated new conceptual insights. How knowledge received from nonhumans (such as animals, plants, atmospheric phenomena) can be understood, organized, evaluated, and benefitted? The course also explores how to carry out research in collaborative and community-based approach. The last lecture of the course includes the study of research ethics and research agreements, as well as the current EU ethical guidelines of research involving humans.

Predvideni študijski rezultati:

Študentke in študentje bodo osvojili praktična metodološka orodja, ki jim bodo omogočila lažjo izvedbo raziskave, ki bo presegla koncept dekolonizacije. Poslužili se bodo novega razumevanja dokazov in postopkov pridobivanja trditev o vednosti in resnici.

Intended learning outcomes:

Students will gain practical methodological tools to carry out decolonising research and novel skills to approach and evaluate truth claims.
