Vsebina:	Content (Syllabus outline): This course presents the history of books—in particular, the ways in which various cultures from Antiquity to the present have created, disseminated, transmitted, and received texts. The overview includes various material, cultural, and theoretical carriers, aspects, and forms of books, including manuscripts, printed books, and digital books. The presentation of each historical period includes an outline of the social, economic, and cultural conditions that determined the book form and content. In addition, the main elements of book culture are analyzed for each period; for example, the author's, editor's, publisher's, and printer's position, the methods of publishing and selling books, library types, the canonization process, literacy scope, the reading public's horizon, and
